Contributors to performance

- Selection within the industrials, communication services, and information technology sectors contributed to relative results.
- An overweight allocation to financials and a lack of exposure to the materials sector were additive to relative returns.
- The top relative contributors were overweight positions in ZoomInfo Technologies and Salesforce, as well as not holding Zoom Video.

Detractors from performance

- The primary driver of underperformance was security selection. Security selection within the health care, consumer staples and consumer discretionary sectors detracted from relative performance.
- An overweight allocation to the industrials sector detracted from relative performance.
- Not holding Tesla and Moderna, as well as an overweight position in Fidelity National Information were the top relative detractors.

Major changes to portfolio in the period

- During the quarter moved from an overweight position to neutral in the consumer discretionary sector and we added to our information technology holdings.
- We added several new opportunities, including ICON, a clinical research organization (CRO) that provides outsourced development services to the pharmaceutical, biotechnology, and medical device industries, Skyworks Solutions, a manufacturer of semiconductor products, and Gartner, an IT research and advisory services company.
